PSYCHOSOCIAL BEHAVIOURAL ASSESSMENT

Sometimes the observations of an outside person can provide the insight we need

A Psychosocial behavioural assessment can provide an overview of how a child functions or struggles in their environment.

The assessor can observe the child:

- at school or day care
- at home
- at community programs

A comprehensive summary report that includes recommendations and strategies will then be presented to interested parties. The assessor can also attend agency or school meetings with parents or legal guardians to share information or assist in advocating for program that will meet the child's needs.
